

Pacific Engagement stream visa (PEV)

Australian Government

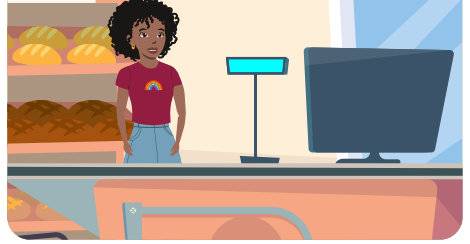

Hi Vani! I see you've been selected in Australia's ballot for the Pacific Engagement stream visa, the PEV. Congratulations!

Yes, I'm excited to move to Australia soon! I'm bringing my family too.

Have you applied for your PEV yet?

No, I thought the invitation means I have a PEV.

Your invitation to apply is not a PEV - you still need to apply for it. You have 120 days to apply from the time you got your Notification of Selection letter.

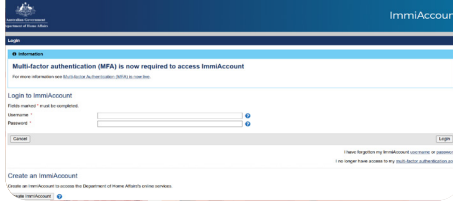

How do I apply?

First, gather your information and documents. Scan this QR code for a checklist of things we might need.

Go to the link in your invitation letter, or login to your ImmiAccount. Complete the application, attach a copy of your passport and other documents, pay the visa application charge and press submit.

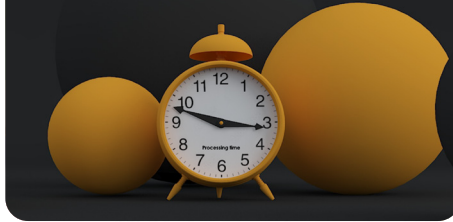

What if I don't have all the documents when I apply?

Provide those documents as soon as you can, for example, birth certificates for all visa applicants.

You can do this after you apply, but the sooner you submit those documents, book your health checks, and provide any extra information we ask for, the sooner we can process your application.

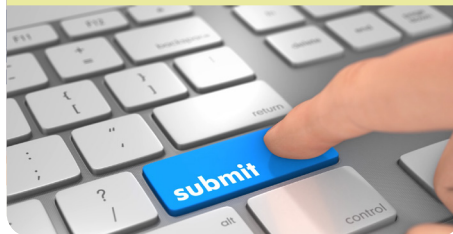

Do I need to provide information about family coming with me?

Include all eligible family members coming with you in your application when you first apply. Unless they were born after you apply, you cannot add them later.

If family members are still waiting for their passport or other documents, you can also submit these details after you apply.

Where can I get help with finding a job in Australia?

The PEV Employment Support Service can connect you with employers in Australia to help you find a job. Email employment@pevsupport.com.au

Email: employment@pevsupport.com.au

We're looking forward to welcoming you to Australia, Vani. Don't forget to apply for your PEV in time.

Selected in the PEV ballot?

Remember to apply for your PEV within 120 days of being invited.
