

Important – Please read this information carefully before you complete your undertaking. Once you have completed your undertaking we strongly advise that you keep a copy for your records.

Who is required to sign a health undertaking?

A health undertaking is required for applicants whose health examination indicated exposure to tuberculosis or other health conditions of concern.

What is a health undertaking for?

Tuberculosis is a serious infectious disease of public concern in Australia. Tuberculosis can be treated and the purpose of this health undertaking is to ensure that persons at greater risk of developing active tuberculosis receive appropriate follow-up support once in Australia.

At the time of your assessment, our doctors were satisfied that you did not have active tuberculosis. However, individual risk factors mean that some people require follow-up in Australia to ensure the disease does not develop.

You may also have been issued with a health undertaking because of another health condition such as Hepatitis B, Hepatitis C, HIV or Leprosy.

A health undertaking is an agreement that is made with the Australian Government, which obliges you to attend an appointment with a health authority clinic for a follow-up health examination. By signing this health undertaking you also agree to undergo any course of treatment or investigation that the health clinic directs.

What do I do now?

Should you agree to abide by the health undertaking, you should sign this form and return it to the Department of Home Affairs (the Department) office processing your visa application.

If the applicant is a minor under 16 years of age then a parent or guardian should sign form 815.

You will then be provided with a copy of this form. Please keep the copy as you will need it when you contact the Health Undertaking Service after you arrive in Australia.

If I applied overseas, what happens after my visa is granted and I arrive in Australia?

The Australian Government provides free initial health checks to minimise the risk of spread of tuberculosis to close family, friends and the community. If the doctor thinks it is necessary, treatment for tuberculosis will be arranged.

Note: It is in your interest to make an appointment promptly.

If you completed your health examinations for this application outside Australia

You are required to contact the Health Undertaking Service (HUS) when you arrive in Australia. You must make an appointment with the HUS within 4 weeks of your arrival. For information on how to contact the HUS see <https://immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/meeting-our-requirements/health/health-undertaking>

If you completed your health examinations for this application in Australia

If your visa was granted in Australia, you will have generally already been referred to an Australian health clinic, however, you must still register your details with the HUS within 4 weeks after your visa has been granted. For information on how to contact the HUS see <https://immi.homeaffairs.gov.au/help-support/meeting-our-requirements/health/health-undertaking>

What happens if my health condition changes?

If your condition changes, your visa will not be at risk. It is important that you attend the relevant health authority to comply with your health undertaking. The Department wants your condition to be treated successfully.

Why should I attend a health clinic?

It is in your best interests to comply with the requirements of your health undertaking. Your co-operation with the health undertaking is vital to assist the Australian Government to protect you, your family and the Australian community.
